

The boy-sailors become a railway detective squad!

THE BOYS OF THE BIG MAST

ANDY WILSON and Joe "Pedlar" Palmer had just completed their first term at H.M.S. Landon, the shore establishment where the Navy trained young sailors. It was known as the School of the Big Mast, because a huge ship's mast was one of its most noticeable features. The boys had been given a week-end pass, and Andy and Pedlar led the dash into the local station to catch the train home.
