

Story Notes and Behind the Scenes at

No. 85 It's a Dirty Business

Issue 85 is what's known as a 'jumping on issue.' Or in other words a recapping of the main events. This being a long running series (which I acknowledge does story line wise bounce around a bit), it is useful every once in a while to recap events and remind readers about various characters. I've also mentioned key issues for readers to refer back to to fill in or remind themselves of what has gone before. And also to hide some clues or red herrings in this story.

The series is now only fifteen issues away from issue 100. I have an idea of the stories to be told in the run up to that issue. Whether I keep to the schedule or not is another matter. I was blown off course slightly by a death in the family just under two years ago now and by the ongoing Coronavirus pandemic.

Storylines tend to tie up events in key issue milestones such as 100. But the present storyline will probably (because of the events mentioned above), start tying up in issue 100 onwards.

Well, it is my comic, I'll do what I want!

Hmm, just noticed this page is called dirtybehind! I might have to change that...one day.