

Behind the Scenes at

Story no. 38 Remember, Remember, the Fifth of November...

Below are a couple of views of the railway carriage passenger compartment that appears in this story. The walls can be removed to allow for different camera shots. I've been building this creation over a large number of months. It was only as this particular story was looming on the horizon, that it was finally finished. In the view below can be seen the carriage corridor and compartments. Three in total.

The Teddy Boy minifigures (left), were printed from designs I gave to Minifigforlife, a British Lego Printing company.

The yellow coated Teddy Boy is a customised minifigure from another British company, Minifigures.com
